NOTE

The designations employed and the presentation of the material in this publication do not imply the expression of any opinion whatsoever on the part of the Secretariat of the United Nations concerning the legal status of any country, territory, city or area or of its authorities, or concerning the delimitation of its frontiers or boundaries.

Where the designation "country or area" appears in the headings of tables, it covers countries, territories, cities or areas.

This issue of the Population and Vital Statistics Report presents data on population size (total, male and female) from the latest available census of the population, national official population estimate for 2001 or 2002, and the number and rate for vital events (births, deaths and infant deaths) for the latest available year after 1980[1]. It also presents United Nations estimates of the mid-year population of the world, with its major areas and regions, for 2001 and 2002. These estimates were prepared by the Population Division of the United Nations Secretariat,[2] while the national estimates were provided by the respective countries and areas. The data are presented in three tables:

Table 1. Estimated mid-year population by major area and region, 2001 and 2002

Table 2. Population, latest available census and estimates for 2001 or 2002

Table 3. Live births, deaths and infant deaths, latest available year since 1980

TECHNICAL NOTES

A. Population

Estimated mid-year population (table 1), prepared by the United Nations Population Division of the United Nations Secretariat, is derived on the basis of assumptions regarding future trends in fertility, mortality and international migration. A brief description of the methodology and explanation of the medium variant assumptions, on which these estimates were based, are presented in the World Population Prospects: The 2002 Revision.[2]

Latest population census (table 2) represents the results of a nation-wide population census available in the Demographic Yearbook database of the United Nations Statistics Division. The data presented are from censuses conducted on either a de jure or de facto basis – using different methods of enumeration, be it conventional/traditional, based on administrative/population registers or a combination of methods that may include a sample survey. The code displayed in the column "Code" indicates whether the population census was conducted on the de facto or de jure basis. Population census data are presented for 235 countries and areas.

Mid-year population estimates for 2001 or 2002 (table 2) refer to 1 July of the given year unless otherwise noted, and are presented as reported by national statistical authorities.

B. Vital statistics

Data presented in table 3 refer to live births, deaths and infant deaths (excluding foetal deaths) for the latest available year after 1980, that occurred to the de facto population within the present national boundaries and were recorded in the civil registers of the country or area, unless otherwise noted. As far as possible, the data are for live births or deaths that occurred during the specified year. In some cases, however, they relate to events registered during the year and may include events that occurred in previous years, and exclude events that occurred during that year, but were not registered.

Quality of registration. The assessment by the completeness of civil registration of countries and areas, when known, is represented as: "C", complete (i.e., covering 90 per cent or more of the events occurring in the year) or as "U", incomplete (i.e., covering less than 90 per cent of the events occurring in the year). Data not derived from civil registration and considered reliable, such as estimates derived from projections, other estimation techniques or population and housing census, are indicated by "|".

Rates. Birth and death rates are the number of births or deaths reported in the specified year per thousand mid-year population. Official national estimates of mid-year population are used to calculate these rates. The infant mortality rate is estimated as the number of deaths of infants less than one year of age per thousand live births in the same year. Unless otherwise noted, the rates shown were computed by the Statistics Division of the United Nations Secretariat. Rates were only computed when the numerator—number of births, deaths or infant deaths—is at least 30. Furthermore, rates were computed only if the quality code for births, deaths or infant deaths (see the paragraph above) was "C" or "|".

[1] These data are also published in the United Nations Demographic Yearbook with complementary statistics, including land area corresponding to the present boundaries of the country or area, and technical notes.

C. Symbols

The following symbols and notations are used:

...	Data or information not available/rates not computed
|	Source of vital statistics other than civil registration
*	Provisional figure
+	Data tabulated by year of registration rather than occurrence
C	Complete registration (at least 90 per cent coverage of the vital event in the year)
U	Incomplete registration (less than 90 per cent coverage of the vital event in the year)
DF	Population de facto
DJ	Population de jure

D. Highlights

1. Population censuses

One of the goals of this report is to present the most recent data for total, male and female population collected by a national population census. In the majority of cases, national population censuses are carried out once every ten years, i.e., usually once every census decade. A census decade, as defined and implemented by the United Nations, encompasses ten years starting with the fifth year of a decade and ending in the fourth year of the next decade, e.g., the current census decade or 2000 census round, as it is also called, started in 1995 and will end at the end of 2004. Detailed information on planned, conducted or postponed national population censuses is collected by the United Nations Demographic Yearbook system and presented at: http://unstats.un.org/unsd/demographic/census/cendate/index.htm.

Census figures for total, male and female population in this publication are presented for 235 countries and areas. Out of these, 164 (or approximately 70 per cent) refer to 2000 round of censuses (i.e., the census was conducted and data refer to one of the years in the 1995-2004 range), 47 (or approximately 20 per cent) refer to the 1990 census round (1985-1994), and 24 (approximately 10 per cent) refer to the 1980 census round (1975-1984). The data presented reflect the following situations: not all countries conducted censuses in the 2000 round; the census round is still under way; countries have conducted their census but have not released the data yet; data, although released by national authorities, did not reach the Demographic Yearbook. In sum, readers will find the most recent census data, including the date of the population census, for 164 countries and areas of the world.

2. Vital statistics

The availability of detailed vital statistics for a country or area illustrates national capacity in the compilation of these statistics from civil registration systems that are recognized as the most accurate and reliable source. With this in mind, this report aims at presenting the most recent data on total live births, deaths and infant deaths received by the Demographic Yearbook system so far.

Data on live births for 2002 or 2003 are presented for 45 out of 235 countries and areas (approximately 19 per cent); for 86 countries and areas data are available for 2000 or 2001 (approximately 37 per cent); and for 70 countries and areas (approximately 30 per cent) data refer to a year between 1980 and 1999. It has to be emphasized that statistics on live births are not available for 34 countries (approximately 14 per cent). It must also be emphasized that the number of countries and areas for which data on infant deaths are not available is higher, 51 (approximately 22 per cent of the total).

When vital statistics are available for a country or area, their source is not necessarily a civil registration system. It may be a periodic survey, national projections or census. These sources are considered reliable despite lacking continuity, simultaneity and universality of a civil registration system. On the other hand, if the source of vital statistics is a civil registration system, it is not always complete. Completeness here refers to the coverage of the civil registration system that was used for deriving vital statistics. If less than 90 per cent of all births and deaths (including infant deaths) are registered by the civil registration system, the coverage is assessed as incomplete. The assessment of completion is produced by national statistical authorities and reported to the Demographic Yearbook system. The graph below presents the number of countries or areas by the source of vital statistics, and in the case of civil registration, by the completeness of its coverage.

NOTES

• Data refer to 2001

1 Including the enclave of Cabinda.

2 Census result have been adjusted for underenumeration, estimated at 1.4 per cent.

3 Census result, excluding Mayotte.

4 Data refer to Libyan nationals only.

5 Census results have been adjusted for underenumeration, estimated at 5.1 per cent.

6 Mid-year estimates have been adjusted for underenumeration, at latest census.

7 Census results have been adjusted for underenumeration, estimated at 9 per cent.

8 Excluding institutional population.

9 Updated postcensal estimates.

10 Population statistics are based on administrative records, not on questionnaire-based population census.

11 Comprising Bonaire, Curaçao, Saba, St. Eustatius and Dutch part of St. Martin.

12 Including armed forces stationed in the area.

13 Excluding armed forces overseas and civilian citizens absent from country for an extended period of time.

14 Excluding civilian citizens absent from country for extended periods of time.

15 Data include persons in remote areas, military personel outside the country, merchant seamen at sea, civilian seasonal workers outside the country, and other civilians outside the country, and exclude nomads, foreign military, civilian aliens temporarily in the country, transients on ships and Indian jungle population.

16 Excluding nomadic Indian tribes.

17 Excluding Indian jungle population.

18 Census result, excluding nomad population.

19 Data refer to the settled population based on 1979 Population census; an estimated 1.5 million nomads are not included.

20 The calculating methodology of the number of the de facto and de jure population in 2001 census data differs from the previous ones, as the duration of population's being present and absent in temporary present and absent statuses, in contrast with the previous censuses, when 6 months period, was adopted, now is under one year. That's why from the point of view of comparisons some discrepancies may emerge.

21 Excluding foreign diplomatic personnel and their dependants.

22 For statistical purposes, the data for China do not include those for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (Hong Kong SAR), Macao special Administrative Region (Macao SAR) and Taiwan province of China.

23 For the civilian population of 31 provinces, municipalities and autonomous regions.

24 Data refer to Hong Kong resident population at the census moment, which covers usual residents and mobile residents. Usual residents refer to two categories of people: (1) Hong Kong permanent residents who had stayed in Hong Kong for at least three months during the six months before or for at least three months during the six months after the census moment, regardless of whether they were in Hong Kong or not at the census moment; and (2) Hong Kong non-permanent residents who were in Hong Kong at the census moment. Mobile Residents, they are Hong Kong permanent residents who had stayed in Hong Kong for at least one month but less than three months during the six months before or for at least one month but less than three months during the six months after the census moment, regardless of whether they were in Hong Kong or not at the census moment.

25 Data refer to government controlled areas.

26 Data include all population irrespective of citizenship, who at the time of the census have resided in the country or intended to reside for a period of at lenst one year. It does not distinguish between those present or absent at the time of census.
